

SHA Detroit | Food, Drink & Entertainment Guide

Detroit is a city of many distinct neighborhoods. The Ren Cen (conference venue) is located in Downtown Detroit. Nearby the hotel are many restaurants, coffee shops and sports/music venues that typically cater to businesspeople, locals, and out of towners.

For a more local flavor of Detroit, venture into nearby neighborhoods of Midtown, Corktown, Mexicantown, the North End, Eastern Market, Brush Park, and East English Village. All of these neighborhoods are safe and accessible via ride shares or public transit.

Detroit has a reputation for being dangerous, but the areas listed above are not. There is little to be concerned about if you are alert to the risks any city poses. Be aware of your surroundings, don't leave property unattended, and don't walk alone at night. Detroiters are friendly & very proud of their city; they will be happy to assist with directions, etc if you ask for help. For emergencies, dial 911.

Getting Around

Detroit's streets are organized along 5 main roads that extend radially (and confusingly) from Campus Martius & Woodward Ave. Woodward Ave runs N-S through the center of the city and is Detroit's main thoroughfare. Everything the east of Woodward is referred to as the East Side, and to the west, West Side.

Walking

The Riverfront Esplanade that runs along the Detroit River in front of the Ren Cen is a safe, pedestrian zone and path that connects the East Villages, Corktown, and the Dequindre Cut bike/walking path system. Good for walking & running.

Downtown and Midtown are pedestrian friendly, walkable neighborhoods. But Detroit is a very spread out city, so it's not possible to walk everywhere.

Public Transportation

People Mover - The elevated monorail runs in a counter-clockwise direction around downtown. There is a stop inside the Ren Cen. Take the People Mover to the Grand Circus stop to connect to the Q Line. Cost: free

Q-Line - The streetcar that runs along Woodward Avenue from downtown to Midtown and the North End every 15 mins. The Congress St. station is a 10 min walk from the Ren Cen, or connect via the People Mover (see above). The Q-Line stops in the heart of the city's Midtown museum district. Cost: free

Bus - DDOT city buses run throughout the city for $2 a trip. See the DDOT website for routes and schedules. Some routes are easy to manage, others can be quite unreliable.

Rideshare - Uber and Lyft are good options city-wide and offer the fastest and easiest ways of getting from one place to another.
