Getting to Baltimore

The Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport (BWI) makes it easy to get to Baltimore by air. The airport is named after Thurgood Marshall, Baltimore native and the first African American to serve on the United States Supreme Court. BWI is located ten miles from Baltimore, and it serves all major airlines, including international flights. BWI is easy to navigate and was ranked the best airport for its size by Airports Council International in 2010.

To get to the conference hotel from the airport, we recommend a rental car, airport shuttle, or taxi. BWI has a full service car rental facility. SuperShuttle is a shared-ride van service available to take you to and from the airport. The SuperShuttle stop is located outside baggage claim, and will take you directly to the hotel. It currently costs $13 each way and reservations should be made in advance either online or by calling 1-800-BLUE-VAN. The airport also had a taxi stand and the fare to the hotel is about $35 one way.

Both Reagan National Airport (DCA) and Dulles International Airport (IAD) are also relatively close to Baltimore. More information is available at <http://www.metwashairports.com/dulles/dulles.htm> (Dulles/IAD) and <http://www.metwashairports.com/reagan/reagan.htm> (Reagan/DCA).

Baltimore is a convenient drive from many major cities. Located on I-95, it is three hours from Richmond, less than four hours from New York City, and around eight hours from Columbus, OH. E-ZPass is accepted on all Maryland toll roads.

Parking

The conference hotel offers on-site parking at a rate of $8.50/hour or $26/day. Valet parking is also available for $40/day. Their parking garage does not accommodate oversized vehicles. There are numerous other parking garages in walking distance, as well as metered on-street parking. As we get closer to the conference, check the official SHA Conference blog for information on the best parking near the hotel.
