

Heinz Bottle Codes
Revised by John Lord

Heinz food category bottles and jars (based upon 2006 BRG data):

Multiple patent design bottles and jars used across various food categories (listed in their respective uses) - should be amended also saying "utility bottle" or "utility jar".

MANY missing bottle and jar numbers designations in the Heinz list #1-#716 (some refound)
UNSURE if missing bottle and jar numbers were drawing designs that didn't reach actual patent design status and actual production status

How many actual patent design bottles and jars of Heinz needs to be run down the entire panoply of the patent office and patent designs ... and find these missing bottle numbers between these other noted patent design dates ... and restored into the list and what food product they were associated with - or utility bottles or utility jars.

Also a massive research needs to be entailed to fill in the missing data for xx ounces of these bottles and jars (and/or their also needed height of glassware).

Massive research in validating whether the bottle numbers are explicitly handblown, machine made, conversion dates of handblowns to machine makes, which ones had collateral lines of handblowns and machine makes (of corks and screw threads etc).

A further research needs to validate which bottles are explicitly corks, cork conversions to screw threads, screw threads,

Further research of specific bottle numbers holding specific types of food product, "Egyptian" style brown mustard, and "Trieste" 10-sided mug bottom jar mustard are 2 examples. One might question the same for the size or the style of Imperial ketchup (competitive Curtice Bros Imperial ketchup brand), as well as various other ketchup styles having their own bottle numbers as hot ketchup, mustard ketchup, walnut ketchup, One easily questions all the many sauce bottles and their distinct-shaped food product bottles. The same for the EXTENSIVE list of pickle bottles (!)

Further research filling in the missing style of food product for that bottle number - many have missing ketchup or mustard etc pickles styles that need to be identified. Saying it held xx ounces (of mustard or ketchup) doesn't say 8 ounces of hot mustard or Heinz Regal Mustard etc.

One might also for absolute clarity detail which bottles would be aqua glass, quartz clear glass, flint clear glass, ... Owens machines generation 1 "ring with feathering", Owens machines generation 2 "ring no feathering onwards).

If there were such mentions of British Ashley, John Bull, or Universal machines being used and their date ranges and who operated them would assist with bottle date ranges, machine identification etc.

When did Sharpsburg start using Owens machines (1903-1910 period) and which food bottle lines would then be using these in their collateral or conversion lines for specific bottle numbers (and the handblown?, machine made ?) dates when they overlap the (1903-1910) period.

Specific identity of sauce or other bottles using glass "T" stoppers with cork rings vs full corks.
